

Hip Hop by Julz Hamilton

Not your average Hip Hop

But even jay z said he would give it all away

To have more Common Sense and less D Block

Stop, pop, and lock your attention on the self destruction of little Wayne

Who is heard on every song on every radio every day

The technique is sweet a great marketing scheme

But why not feed us mentally lyrically

It seems that to speak knowledgably behind a beat would be considered a political uncool preacher on the street

so in order to have a Nas song played and build on philosophical theory

I have to add a mother fuck so you ignorant niggas hear me

Hip hop is no longer protected by the Red the Black and the Green

With the key to unlock the Public Enemies

These microphone fiends are paying off black cops for

Gucci man

Don't get me wrong hip hop is built on the various styles and many topics producing economics off of ebonics

So why cant we exchange some of those bullets for some logic

Maybe some of you 80's babies need some De la Soul

To realize the words of TI

Cause some of this is Ludacris

We built a nation from words with a beat box

Which is heard from a New York curb

Around the world making a European nerd head nod until the beat stops

Hip Hop was birthed from a Lyrical assembly of thoughts

Brought from the main vessel of rage and pain

However today

That struggle that once was is not the same

So why not revamp the social political game

Cause it's time....
